SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1885.

Senator Logan will have a reception at Chicago this evening and will be tendered a dinner by the Chicago Union League next Tuesday.

The first delegates chosen to the Ohio Republican Convention were elected in Logan County last Saturday and instructed to support General Kennedy for Governor. He resides in the county.

District officials who have made an investigation of the charges as to the pollution of the Potomac water supply say that the alarming statements have been much exaggerated and do not have substantial foundation.

The Boston Herald which has so persistently pledged itself in behalf of the Administration for the appointment of Philbrick, has failed to say about the additional honors heaped upon his hero of the King's Evil.

The offensive partisanship dodge has narrowed down to a simple question of whether or not the stockholder voted the Republican ticket and if he did he has to go! It's only take a fool and two months to explode the force.

Commissioner Coleman now has called for the resignation of Mr. W. Doherty, chief of the Division of Statistics in the Agriculture Department. Mr. Doherty's record is upon report he had to vote the Republican ticket. Some his removal by this time for Administration.

The Republican steadily gaining ground in Washington with the Senate will make a searching examination into the causes which led to the appointment of Republicans to office there. Many have expired and will be in most instances the only excuse assigned. It will now partisanship through the Senate will be blocked exclusively proving the business of the country.

The New York Evening Post, Cleveland's organ, says the middle which Gov. Hill has got himself into on the census question is due entirely to his own petty partisanship. Hill's which the Legislature passed was right enough. As this Administration is opposed to offensive partisanship of course Gov. Hill is in the right. Cleveland's veto of date 18th fell.

Chicago Republicans have Hath House in Springfield in opposition to the use of the House for caucuses by Democratic State and Congressional Committees. Mr. Springer had that to month in the House. The Republican body was in night. Mr. McCord said that he would vote to the bill. It was a matter of importance in keeping up the party. The use of Committee rooms for caucuses and public meetings by Democrats.

The Secretaries of the Grand Army of the Republic will, it is said, take no part in the Treasury watchmen who were dismissed. Restored to their positions by the President's soldiers? That their efforts will be successful is doubted. Mr. Wheeler was personally appealed to. Mr. Wheeler is dismissed which was not to be expected. Managing it is said, he found that he could not resist the appeals and secure the reinstatement of the soldiers from his State. Mr. [illegible]

Right on top of the statement in the Post that the Administration will be opposed to the political claims of the Republican party comes the announcement that Secretary Manning has decided on forty-three Democrats designating Democratic custodians of public buildings. Of the Democrats appointed Philbrick is one. Mr. Manning will of course be opposed to the Administration gives Philbrick [illegible] the building and the salary of about $1,000 per [illegible]

The New York World has been hammering away at the Secretary Baird holding himself responsible for the numerous instances of the Administration and refusing to give the President's report. It is one of the conditions of a Democratic member of the Cabinet. The office of the organs to excuse the President [illegible] differ in number of the Cabinet in business. The [illegible] of Mr. Cleveland to [illegible] full knowledge and consent.

The New York Times of President Cleveland's [illegible] the Chicago postoffice. It is [illegible] Mr. Bond, recently appointed [illegible] has been since his [illegible] to the postoffice [illegible] and at the State capital. It [illegible] would be well for Mr. Cleveland's attention to the [illegible] by his confidential secretary [illegible] ship. The offence [illegible] established in a postmaster of the first class can not be proper [illegible] postmaster of the first [illegible] gentleman who has been [illegible] and is entitled as such to [illegible]

[illegible] most laborious and practical [illegible] public service says a Washington [illegible] Appointment Clerk [illegible] body ever heard, him [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] work that falls upon his shoulders. To [illegible] the task of dividing ways [illegible] offensive partisans who are [illegible] Republicans in fact or love. Some [illegible] seems to have occurred to him that the names of all Republican clerks who went to their homes to vote last fall would be pretty good proof that the clerks whose names were found on the list were "offensive partisans." Most of the clerks, it seems, obtained railroad tickets at a reduced rate upon presenting evidence that they were voters going to their homes to vote. The observance of the form by, of course, involved the keeping of a record of the names and residence of these clerks and a copy of that record, it is said, is now in the hands of Mr. Higgins. It includes the names of 500 clerks who voted in the State of New York and nearly 500 who swelled the vote of Blaine and Logan in Maryland, besides the hundreds of hundreds of clerks who voted in Pennsylvania, Ohio and other States. Since he obtained possession of this document, Mr. Higgins, it is said, has been more firm than ever in his determination to "turn the rascals out."

Justice Field, of California, on learning that the President was thinking of naming Gen. Rosecrans as collector of the port at San Francisco, rushed to the White House and said to Private Secretary Lamont "Such an appointment is unfit, and ought not to be made. Why, this man Rosecrans is a crank! I have no objections to the Administration taking care of him in some other position, but I do not think that the President ought to shove his idea on us." Colonel Lamont assured the Justice that the President had not the slightest idea of appointing General Rosecrans to the place mentioned and Mr. Field said that if such was the case he did not care to take up Mr. Cleveland's time with a useless errand. If Gen. Rosecrans is a "crank" will it not be an imposition for the President to take care of him by an appointment to any public office?

Are there two Lothrops?

HONORS FOR THE SENATE TO CONSIDER—WAS ST OUR NEW MINISTER TO RUSSIA WHOM THE COURT OF APPEALS LASHED WITHOUT MERCY?

(New York Tel. 19.)

In a case brought before the New York Court of Appeals in 1883, George V. N. Lothrop, a lawyer of Detroit, Mich., appears to great disadvantage. President Cleveland has recently appointed a Minister to St. Petersburg George V. N. Lothrop, a lawyer of Detroit, Mich. It seems scarcely possible that there is two lawyers of this name practicing law in Detroit. If the Mr. Lothrop who has been appointed Minister to St. Petersburg is the same one who is referred to by the Court of Appeals in the facts of the case will be come a great matter for consideration by the United States Senate next winter when it comes to pass upon the question of the fourth appointment, this, together with many of the other unfortunate appointments with which President Cleveland and Secretary Bayard have been degrading public offices.

Additional importance is to be attached to the case because of the high reputation of the Court from which the opinion emanated. The New York Court of Appeals is generally recognized in this country in respect to its ability and character as second only to the United States Supreme Court. It appears that the city of Detroit employed as the State of Michigan and the Phoenix Bank. It is found in 93 New York Reports, page 67. The following facts are stated in the opinion:

The Phoenix Bank in March, 1839, advanced to one Newton, who held the office of chief financial position in the State of Michigan, two drafts amounting to $16,000, one to the Farmers and Mechanics Bank for $7,000, the other to the Bank of River Raisin for $8,000. The money was used in the purchase of Indian lands. The advances were made at the request of the Governor of Michigan. It is found by the Court, neither Mr. Soule as Governor nor Mr. Newton as the chief officer of the Legislature had power to contract such a debt. The Court found that the loan was an illegal, inequitable and good consideration on the part of the State of Michigan to enable the city notes to be sold. It is held by the Court that these drafts were issued without authority from the State and afterward violated their own individual faith, and therefore that the demand was not legally contracted for the State. Soule, the Phoenix Bank, which was a New York corporation, filed with the two Michigan banks receiving upon the same for payment "exceptions and protests." Mr. Stewart urged the right through which in these suits the notes were made. Beyond and in excess to the Phoenix Bank, had several thousand dollars were to be loaned from the sale of stock of them.

George V. N. Lothrop was then practicing law at Detroit. In 1838 he was employed by the Phoenix Bank to take charge of the prosecution of its claim against the State of Michigan and in May of that year he presented the matter before the Board of State Auditors. The Court of Appeals, in commenting upon Mr. Lothrop's action, makes the following quotations from his address before the board. "Our standing of the claim is well as the amount will enable it to your full investigation. I do not hesitate to invite such inquiry for if the claim is not well founded both in law and equity, I ask a finding at your hands." The [illegible] of the Phoenix Bank is for the sum of $16,406 drawn into the State on the 18th of March, A. D. 1838.

The opinion of the Court of Appeals then continues as follows: "This statement of Mr. Lothrop is then historical, to a considerable length to prove the liability of the State pledged to pay the demand. At the end of which history, Mr. Lothrop relates to have established six propositions, the sixth and last of which, only, is a statement of fact is important, and it is as follows:

"All the said drafts were received about the Phoenix Bank has never been repaid a dollar to this day." At the close he says: "I now here that I have gaved a fair statement of this claim. I have no hesitation in asking of the courts decision upon it. I am sure that if it was brought before them, would be a case ready for judgment for the claimant."

The italication in the above is that made in the official court report. That which follows is our own.

Upon this written statement of Mr. Lothrop acting as the agent of the Phoenix Banks, and upon the documents produced, the Board of Auditors decided that the Bank was justly and equitably entitled for principal and interest to a balance of $8,094.74, and in December of 1839 the State of Michigan paid the Bank $8,000. The present suit was brought by the State of Michigan to recover back the sum so paid to the Bank on the ground that the Bank was not entitled to either interest or principal. The Court finds that when the claim was presented before the Board of Auditors the members of the Board had any knowledge or suspicion of the fact that the Phoenix Bank with the Michigan banks of the issuing over to the Phoenix Bank the proceeds of those settlements. The rest of the case so far as it relates to Mr. Lothrop is left to be in the language of Judge Potter in the Court of Appeals opinion.

"That the allegations in the said written communications by Mr. Lothrop to the Board of State Auditors that the debt to the Phoenix Bank never has in fact been paid, and that it would fairly and fully state to said Board every dollar ever loaned and hitherto set, and the statement which he did therein make in regard to the alleged or supposed deficiencies and his omission and the omission of said Phoenix Bank to notify said Board of the said notice given by the Phoenix Bank to the River Raisin Bank not to pay said draft for $7,000, or of the settlement made by said Stewart with said bank, or of the said settlement made in him with the Michigan State Bank or of the collection by said Stewart of some of the said securities as aforesaid received by him from said River Raisin Bank, and of his substitution of the residue thereof for other property with the assent of said Phoenix Bank, or of the said deed of conveyance from Stewart to the old Phoenix Bank of the date of August 5, 1852, or of the said deed of settlement and release between said Bank and Stewart of the date of August 5, 1852, were designed and intended to mislead the said Board of State Auditors as to the actual facts and merits of the case relating to said claim, and that such allegations were made and such omissions were practiced in the full belief that if the actual facts of the case, or such notice thereof as would lead to inquiry, should come to the knowledge of said Board, the said claim would be rejected and disallowed as unfounded in justice or equity."

Judge Potter then continues: "This brings us to the examination of the leading feature and most important point in this case, to wit: whether the obtaining of money from the State of Michigan upon a claim upon which there was no liability upon the State in equity and good conscience through the medium of one of the State tribunals acting judicially in the matter, by means of false and fraudulent allegations and representations, and of false and fraudulent omissions of facts where the false allegations and representations so made, and the omissions so practiced, were designed and intended to mislead the said tribunal as to the actual facts and merits of the case relating to said claim, and when such allegations and such omissions were practiced in the full belief by the parties making and practicing the same that if the actual facts of the case, or such notice of them as would lead to inquiry should come to the knowledge of such tribunal, that the said claim would be rejected and disallowed as unfounded in justice or equity, can be recovered back from the party so obtaining it by such means?

"The facts found by the Judge establish a case of active, designed and intended fraud on the part of the defendants, not only in the statements, allegations and representations made, but a designed and intended fraud in what was omitted to be stated, which in law amounts to fraudulent concealment. It was not merely a innocent silence, or omission to disclose, which may sometimes be without dishonesty, but it was active concealment, coupled with the intent that the State of Michigan, whose interest it was to know the facts known to the defendants, should remain ignorant of them with a view to the advantage of the defendants. This the law characterizes as fraudulent concealment.

"As a test of such notice and design, a single instance of each may suffice. One of the express statements made to this board by the agent was 'that the Phoenix Bank has never been paid a dollar to this day (the day of trial).' One of the material concealments was the fact of the receipt at one time of above $2,000 from the securities taken from the River Raisin Bank. It is conceivable in the nature of things that this positive statement and this concealment can be innocent. No theory of innocence is suggested or offered as a defence for either. none is attempted. They stand with the other features of fraud. Could, in their naked and indefensible form. These features not even deceive."

The question thus fairly presented for the judgment of this court to wit, whether money can be held upon a claim made by means of a judgment, or other judicial proceeding, which was obtained through the fraud, falsehood and imposition of the party obtaining it upon the tribunal, by which it was adjudged and where the money so obtained was paid by the Treasurer of the State and by the party receiving it could be recovered back by the party from whom it was obtained through such means, it was said that

"It is not aware of any case in point, on the other hand of which the reproach has been cast upon the courts for holding that the standing or sight of a perpetrator of a fraud upon the form or solemnity of the instrument by which he obtains his award, from advantage will shield him in the enjoyment of his ill gotten gains.

"Upon the facts found in this case, stating unexcused—with active precedent and clearly establishing—dishonest intent to pollute the sentiment of the right, it seems to us the administration of justice well and does a disservice to the injured party. Neither reason nor the equity due to a sister State upon the one hand nor local security for injustice within our own, are considerations worthy of a moment as thought. The unchanging and unalterable principles of justice and equity the rule to determine the case.

"Upon the whole case I am of opinion that the form of our judgment should be to restore the parties to their rights in the judgment to be affirmed on the pleadings, the State of Michigan will recover so much of their judgment as is found on the trial to be equal to the debt of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Detroit with interest.

"All the judges of the judgment concur in all the views expressed in the foregoing opinion. Upon other grounds, fully stated by Chief Judge Dean and Judge Porter, they all concur with Judge Potter in his conclusions as to the judgment to be rendered."

GENERAL GRANT

A Better Night Than Anticipated

NEW YORK, May 22 There was some improvement in Gen Grant's throat yesterday and he was relieved by frequent attempts to relieve the pain of mucus These efforts were painful to the parts, and the doctors were apprehensive of a wakeful night for the patient But Dr Douglas came through the night well When the doctor left this morning the general's prospects were considered fair for his slept and he continued to sleep until 7 o'clock, after which he slept quietly for an hour and a half longer This forenoon At 10 o'clock he was still sleeping, if any pain he was free from it, the night sweats had ceased and he was not greatly affected the General's condition

Much Better in the Afternoon

Dr Douglas called this afternoon Mr Douglas said he had not seen the General since he was in two weeks He expected to leave in the morning The doctor attributed the General's illness to a congestion in the throat last night and the fatigue of the air of the Park, which affected the General while driving

This afternoon General Grant received a memorial of the Vicksburg campaign from a pamphlet is furnished from the War Department His work on the book is the employment of prepared matter, incident and anecdote as these may occur to his mind The book was practically finished Wednesday last. Dr Douglas was first notified to attend Gen Grant about 3 months ago

FROM WASHINGTON.

News About the Capital.

An Ex-Soldier Asked to Resign—Order of the "Individual Cases" to Which the President Cannot Attend.

WASHINGTON, May 22. Secretary Manning has called for the resignation of Major B. Willard Saxton, of Mass., Chief of a Division of the First Comptroller's office. It is said that Saxton will refuse to resign, on the ground that there are no charges whatever against him, either on the ground of inefficiency or offensive partisanship. It is understood that he will be given until June 10th to comply with the request. Major Saxton was an officer in the army during the war and is a brother of Gen Rufus Saxton, U S A.

Judge Dunham said to-night that Saxton was a faithful and efficient employe and had not meddled with politics. The removal is taken as indicating that the civil service rules will not protect the Chiefs of Divisions as has generally been supposed.

The Case of Paymaster General Smith.

The Identity of the Murdered French Woman

Chief of Police Walling to-day received the following despatch from Pittsfield, Mass "Chief of Police, New York: There can be but little doubt that the woman murdered by Francois Mary Todart, or Mary Fatro, so called Her father is Jean Fatro, of Washington Mountain, Berkshire county

Want to Reorganize the Civil Service Commission

The Evening Post's Washington special says there are some indications that an effort will be made to secure the reorganization of the Civil Service Commission Western politicians say there ought to be two pronounced Democrats and one Republican on the board The matter has probably not yet been called to the attention of the President.

A Body Found—Is it Mr. Conant?

A Fisherman at Bath, L I, found a body floating in the harbor yesterday which is supposed to be that of S S Conant, the missing editor of Harper's Weekly The body is very much decomposed and had evidently been in the water for a long time

The Inter State Commerce Committee

The Senate Committee on Inter State Commerce, met again at Fifth Avenue Hotel to-day. George R Blanchard, formerly Vice-President of the Erie Railway addressed the committee for two hours He spoke in favor of a just discrimination in rates and against unjust discrimination He favored pooling and the United States Railway Commission He contended that there were already too many railways and that no new roads should not be built unless as a necessity

James H Soymour, of the Mercantile Exchange, favored the appointment of a Commission representing the Mercantile, Railroad, Agricultural, Financial, Manufacturing and labor interests

Ex Mayor Edson told the Senators that the merchants desired a uniform bill of lading with power of enforcement in all States, and uniformity of rates before all else President Herrick, of the Produce Exchange, expressed the opinion that the Government should manage the railways The Produce Exchange, Mr Herrick said, was thoroughly opposed to the rebate and drawback system. Henry V Poor, editor of Poor's Railway Manual, argued that railways should be let alone to work out their own salvation The Government, he maintained should mind its own business of acting as a sort of police in preventing corporations from cutting each others' throats. There were on our statute books laws enough to control the railways if they were enforced

Tammany and the Collectorship

The Tammany Hall committee on organization to-night passed a resolution approving the civil service laws and urging the President to select for the Collectorship of this port a man who while able to unite the different Democratic factions in this city, would at the same time best represent the city's commercial interest Police Justice Gorman said that John Kelly now at Clifton Springs, was in better health than for years Immediately upon that was received with cheers and the committee sent a telegram of congratulations

The Legislature Passed the Census Bill and Adjourns Sine Die

ALBANY, May 22. The Senate programme to pass the census bill yesterday could not be carried out Accordingly an adjournment was taken until nine this morning When the Senate reassembled the pending motion was on its third reading The only amendments of importance which were adopted were to change dates so if the Secretary of State should be delayed in starting the count he may have additional time It was also ordered that the enumeration in cities shall be completed within two weeks from the day upon which it is begun, instead of within two weeks from the first of July. In this shape the bill was passed and sent over to the Assembly, where it was passed without amendment and both houses adjourned sine die at 12 20 without waiting to learn what action the Governor will take

The Democrats Troubled.

The Democratic members of the Legislature have issued a long address to Democrats arraigning the Republicans for failure to pass a constitutional bill for the taking of the census

AMONG THE ICEBERGS

A Bark and a Steamer Sunk—Three Days on an Iceberg.

QUEBEC, May 22 The bark Brilliant, which arrived here last night from Poragrand, had on board the crews of the bark Bayard, from Drabek for Metis, and of the steamer Mary Louise, of New Castle, from New York for Liverpool Capt Jn Anderson, of bark Bayard, states that he left Drabek April 4th at midnight. On the 6th of May the vessel ran into the ice near the banks of Newfoundland She was completely surrounded by heavy ice and icebergs. The crew remained on board the vessel till Tuesday afternoon, when the icebergs smashed in her port side. They then took to the boats and went on the ice, barely escaping with their lives and saving nothing whatever.

They remained three days and three nights on the ice All the provision they were able to save was a bag of bread and this becoming wet added to their misery. Sunday, they came out of the ice and took the boat and pulled westward in a thick fog. After about two hours they heard a steamer's whistle and pulled alongside the vessel, which proved to be the Mary Louise. They were taken aboard and the captain stated that his vessel struck the ice some time before and she was leaking badly. An hour later the Mary Louise began to sink. Both crews, numbering thirty-five left the steamer in three boats and proceeded west again Monday morning, May 11th, the weather became clear and they sighted the bark Brilliant, bound for Quebec. She immediately hove to and took all hands on board, bringing them to this port.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Interesting Correspondence Relating to the Penjdeh Incident.

LONDON, May 22 The correspondence which took place between Col Zakjewski, of Gen Kolmaroff's staff and Capt. Yate, of Gen. Sir Peter Lumsden's staff, respecting the Afghan situation at the time of Penjdeh incident, is now made public It shows, among other things, that on the same day that Col. Zakjewski accepted Capt Yate's invitation to a collation, at which the situation of the opposing outposts was to be discussed, Gen Komaroff sent an ultimatum to Nalb Sahr, Commander of the Afghan forces This ordered Nalb Sahr to withdraw all his troops to the right bank of the Kushk river The ultimatum concluded in these words "There will be neither negotiations nor explanations on the subject. You are too intelligent and sharp sighted to compel me to see to the fulfillment of this demand"

Nalb Sahr replied that he had consulted with Capt Yate and was bound to obey the Ameer Gen Komaroff replied, insisting that compliance with the terms of his ultimatum was necessary to preserve peace He warned Nalb Sahr against heeding the empty counsels of others and concluded thus "The choice between friendship and enmity rests with you" After the battle of Penjdeh, which followed, and his intercourse between Gen Komaroff and Nalb Sahr, Capt Yate wrote to Col Zakjewski soliciting protection and offering the services of the English doctor

An Odd Story of Justice

CHAPTER I.

No doubt there were some in the line of the Queen of Sheba who carped at the wisdom of Solomon and so there were people in the city in the days immediately followed the American war who had something to say against the firm of Parkman, Budd & Parkman of 17 Change Alley. They could not deny that it was an old-established concern for Parkmans had been trading between London and Calcutta in almost the early days of John Company Bahadur. And they could not say that it was not prosperous for its position stood high in its own branch of business and it had never been known to go in for rash speculations or risky profits. But what people did say and thought were of a quite contrary nature. It was thought strange that there was too much young blood in Parkmans. "Go into Parkman's," these would say, "and you'll see a young man to deal with unless you buy plus tick to do with old Parkman's ways, which they seemed to think most offensive. And of course when old Parkman died rather suddenly, those carpers were still more triumphant there was no a sing clause now when they spoke the treasure you might expect of Parkmans. For the second part of the firm was only a sleeping partner—sleeping it was sure the reported on the outside Brighton—and young Parkman—well he was a young Parkman. Then Crib, how the clerks, young for a fisher, being under forty, and Crisp, the head clerk was only a young being something over thirty. And together Parkmans might spare some time to come to have a good deal about its young blood.

It was 2 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon three weeks after Mr. Parkman's death. In the long office the clerks were putting away their books and giving down their pens. There was a murmur of talk from the room where Mr. Crib and young Parkman and the clerks were busily at work for the afternoon when a tall man in a dark mourning frock and wearing a silk hat came from the inner room. He moved quick to a respectable man. He was a tall and fair man with a short fair moustache and light blue eyes. He nodded pleasantly to one or two of the clerks as he walked straight to whose glass door in a corner indicated the sanctum of the head clerk. A tall small slender, dark complexed young man of quiet dress was the chief clerk. But strange which were would hardly have been found in such a place.

He sat at the chair and leaning his head lightly on the office should to stay him. "Hallo, what's the matter, Crisp?" said the tall fair man. "Why, what's the matter with you? Why, you look as if you had seen a ghost!"

Crisp shook his head, and the tall man smoked cordially well.

"And what is more sir, my uncle's dead as well as the ghost! Why, I should think you could stand it better than that! Why, I should think you could stand it better than that! Why, I should think you could stand it better than that!"

Crisp shook his head, and the tall man smoked cordially well.

"And what is more sir, my uncle's dead as well as the ghost
